Who We Are

As the first trust and investment firm owned by credit unions, it's not just our fiduciary duty to act in the best interest of our clients, it's our mandate. In 2004, our investment team adopted the strategy of using Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs) in portfolio design, making us one of the first trust companies in the United States to recognize their lower cost and tax efficiency. Since then, we've been recognized by Forbes and Morningstar for investment strategies that manage both risk and return.

Our Investment Philosophy

We offer a wide range of portfolios from the very aggressive to the more conservative, but in all of our strategies we remain vigilant to downside risks. Our portfolio strategy is to actively manage utilizing index ETF securities. ETFs allow us to package low-cost, liquid, transparent, and tax-efficient vehicles in a way that is easily understood by clients and financial professionals. We focus on long-term strategic asset class allocations and use a top down global macro approach to tactically manage the allocation between asset classes and sub-asset classes in the short-term.

Opportunistic Rebalancing Narrative

September 26, 2023

On 9/26/23, our Investment Team adjusted our fixed-income allocations and bought equity to target. With the 10-year US treasury yield over 4.5%, our Investment Team extended the duration within our primary ETF strategies. We also continued reducing our corporate bond overweight while improving credit quality within portfolios. Current fixed-income portfolio yields are now over 4.6%, and we feel this will improve portfolio returns for members moving forward. On 8/2, after a 10% rally in the S&P 500 during June and July, our Investment Team managed risk by reducing equity to target. Since then, the S&P 500 declined approximately 6% through yesterday which we believe was an attractive area to buy equity back to target.

August 2, 2023

On 5/1 and 6/1/23, we re-allocated within equity by primarily selling S&P 500 exposure (SPY) and buying US small and mid-cap exposures (IJR & IJH). Since that time, IJR and IJH outperformed SPY by approximately 4% while the S&P 500 has rallied approximately 10%. On 8/2, our Investment Team managed risk by rebalancing our primary ETF strategies moving from slightly overweight equity back to target weight. We were able to purchase fixed income with the 10 yr Treasury yield over 4% which we believe will be attractive over the long run. Purchases of 7-10 yr Treasuries (IEF) were generally below our initial purchases on 3/1. We remain optimistic for the US economy in 2023 and expect equity markets to finish the year higher. We will look to be buyers of equity again on a meaningful decline in the short run.

May 31, 2023

On March 1, our Investment Team began the process of reducing the Corporate Bond overweight in our primary investment strategies and increasing our Treasury bond exposure to reduce credit risk within the fixed income portfolio. A week later, when SVB failed and the "banking crisis" began, financial markets responded with what we would consider a mini recession. Interest rates fell sharply, and the additional Treasury exposure (IEF) gained over 5% from 3.1 through 4.6 helping limit downside risk. On May 31 and June 1, we continued the process of reducing the Corporate Bond overweight and adding to our US Treasury bond exposures in our primary investment strategies. We are still confident in the US economy and financial markets for the rest of 2023. In the event that the US economy falls into recession and equity markets come under pressure again, the increased US Treasury exposure should help limit portfolio downside as we are likely to see a flight to quality within fixed income and a widening of credit spreads. Additional changes in our primary investment strategies were a lengthening of duration within the Income model and a reallocation, generally selling S&P 500 and buying US Small Cap (IJR), US Mid Cap (IJH), and US Large Cap Value (VTV) within equity. Since March 1, IJR has underperformed SPY by over 15% and IJH by nearly 13%. The outperformance of the S&P 500 has largely been driven by Large Cap tech. We believe this trend has the potential to reverse in the coming months.

March 1, 2023

Our primary strategies have been overweight corporate bond exposure since the Federal Reserve announced they would begin buying corporate bonds on March 23, 2020. Since that time, seasoned BAA corporate bonds spreads have narrowed from 4.23% to 1.86%, as of 2/24/23, leading to outperformance of Corporate Bonds relative to US Treasuries. Our Investment Team began the process to reduce the Corporate Bond overweight and add to our US Treasury bond exposures. We are still confident in the US economy and financial markets for the rest of 2023. In the event the US economy falls into recession and equity markets again come under pressure then the increased US Treasury exposure should help limit portfolio downside as we are likely to see a flight to quality within fixed income and a widening of credit spreads. We believe credit spreads are less likely to continue to narrow from current levels.

January 9, 2023

On 1/9/23, our Investment Team sold equity down to target weight and bought fixed income in our primary investment strategies. Our primary strategies were modestly overweight equity since purchases around September 26 near the lows of 2022. From 9/27/22 through 1/9/23, the S&P 500 rallied over 7% with Int'l developed (MSCI EAFE) +21%, US large cap value (CRSP US LC Value) +15%, US mid cap (S&P 400) +13%, US small cap (S&P 600) +12%, and Int'l Emerging (MSCI Em) +11%. We remain positive on both equity and fixed income markets for the year but believe the risk-reward tradeoff is no longer as attractive to be overweight equities as it was in September.
